Ball Artists Are Doing.

Hugh McIntosh firmly believed that Bill Lang of Australia was destined to become the champion of the world. There is no doubt of this, for prior to Lang's contest in London with Sam Langford, McIntosh did not hesitate to place himself on record as to how he felt regarding Lang. It was thought after the way the bout ended that McIntosh would admit he had overrated Lang. On the contrary, McIntosh is busy explaining away Lang's "fatal error" in fouling his opponent. A letter from McIntosh is full of apologies for Lang. He says that the aftermath of the big contest bristles with discussions as to what might have been "had not Lang, in a moment of impulse, brought about his own disqualification." According to Mac, the Australian heavyweight received a tremendous ovation when he entered the ring. "This," says McIntosh, "appeared to unnerve him. It influenced his movements during the early part of the contest. On the other hand, Langford, cool, smiling and confident, went at Lang right away under the instruction of his experienced adviser." It seems that in the third round Lang was told to change his tactics. He went right at Langford, and, according to McIntosh, had the better of the exchanges. "When weighing the decision against Lang," writes McIntosh, "it should be borne in mind that when he lost the fight he was on his feet and Langford on the floor." Most of the papers attribute Langford's fall to a slip, but the photographs vividly demonstrate that it was the result of a clean, knockdown blow. It is the opinion of some of the best judges—men who are eminently impartial—that Lang had a really good winning chance if he had not impulsively fouled his opponent. Lang was just about realizing that Langford had done his best. Bill remarked afterwards that Langford's blows were getting lighter, sure proof that Langford was tiring, whilst Lang was settling down to fight in his old style. The foul was a most unfortunate occurrence, but the referee had no option but to disqualify him.

Concerning Catcher Jacklitch and his shyness for work Manager Dooin says: "The most notable thing Jacklitch ever did while with the Phillies was to warm up pitchers sitting in a chair. Billy Murray came across him one day calmly seated with Moren and Brown flinging to him. 'What's this?' shouted Murray. 'A rest cure you're taking?' 'No,' sleepily replied Jacklitch. 'When I'm seated the pitchers know I will not chase any wild throws and it teaches them accuracy.'"

One of the greatest sprinting races of the year will be one of the many features of Pennsylvania's relay races on April 29th. This is due to the fact that "Tex" Ramsdell will be eligible to run in the 100 yards.

A new world's bowling record was hung up in the National Bowling Association tournament recently by Kelso and Johnson of New Haven, who registered a score of 1,355 in the two-men series. The best previous score was 1,318, by McQuirk and Grady of Paterson, N. J.

Celestial Irishman

This Chinaman With an Irish Name
Likes Horses With Small Feet.

When the case against "Sam Mahoney, cruelty to animals," was called in a San Francisco Police court recently there stepped forth from the prisoners' dock a Chinese clad in blouse, pantaloons and sandals. His long queue was tied up in a neat knot.

For a moment or two there was an ominous silence in the courtroom. The detectives blinked their eyes several times in rapid succession.

"That um my name," said the Oriental. "All samee Sam Mahoney. That um good name. Bling good washee to laundly."

The judge held a whispered consultation with the Policeman who had arrested the Chinese.

"The officer tells me," said the court finally, "that you have been driving a horse with lame feet to your wagon and that it was caused by shoes that were too small. What have you got to say to that?"

"Him small shoes. Feet him grow. Him no good."

"I gather," said the court, "that you don't want a horse with big feet. That a horse's feet ought to be bandaged like a Chinese woman?" Sam Mahoney nodded his head in approval.

"The policeman tells me," said the court, "that you adopted the name of Sam Mahoney because it helps your business."

Here Mahoney asked for an interpreter. One was produced. After some conversation in Chinese the interpreter explained the situation thus:

"He says that when he started the laundry he came to the conclusion that he would get all the white trade of the neighborhood if he took the name Mahoney. He says he hung out a sign and the trade came. When any of the patrons asked to see Mahoney he told them that Mahoney had just stepped out and would be back in a few minutes. He says that he has run the place for ten months and has made lots of money. He wants to know if it is all right for him to keep up the sign bearing the name Sam Mahoney."

"Him good name. Sam Mahoney him mightee good bustney man," put in Sam Mahoney smiling.

"Tell him yes" said the court. "But he has got to have that horse's feet fixed up."

Sam Mahoney agreed and the case was dismissed.

Fight fans of Philadelphia will be given a shock on April 24, when Jimmy Britt and Battling Nelson will meet in a bout at Jack O'Brien's club. Nelson and Britt have already met four times, and now the two will once more endeavor to see who is the better man. Britt, who is in London, has written to O'Brien that just as soon as a contract can be drawn up he will sail for New York to meet the other poor old fellow. O'Brien is in communication with Nelson, who will be prepared to battle on the date named. Nelson is in Lexington, Ky.

(By Oscar Brenton.)

Honolulu, March 21, 1911.

The College of Hawaii put another athlete on the pedestal at the track meet on Alexander Field last Saturday. Willie Rice smashed one or two old records, made new ones or tied the college records for the island, in his work at all distances. He did not go with a blare of trumpets and unlike Godfrey he had no trainer who has seen work on professional tracks. He was just plain "Bill" Rice who had been doped to win a hammer throw or something else, but not much. In fact Kamehameha was to have everything that was worth while and Oahu was to get most of what was left, according to the dope sheets. Rice was fit. He had won five events and to the surprise of his admirers entered for the 880 yards dash and won. All of the winnings by Rice go to the credit of Hawaii College which scored forty-two points. Oahu thirty eight and Kamehameha twenty four. Considering that it was generally believed that Kamehameha would win the final count there must have been disappointment out Kalihi way when the result was talked over Saturday night. In the hundred yard dash he won in 10.1-5 with Godfrey third. The mile run was won by Young, of Oahu, with Damon, of the same college, second and Meinicke, same, third. The 440 yard dash won by Rice in 57.3-5, within a fifth of the Island record, Godfrey of Kamehameha second and Gibb of Oahu third. 220 yard dash; Rice 1, Manoha 2, Godfrey 3, Time 23.1-5 beating the island record by a fifth. 220 yard hurdle, Rice 1, Desha 2. Marceillino 3. 27.4-5, two fifths slower than the record. 880 yards Rice 1. Nottage 2. E. Deverill 3. Time 2:8.3-5. Rice had already won five events and it was not thought he could do much in this against Nottage who had everything in his favor. In nearly every event of this character at Oahu, Nottage takes the lead and holds it to the end leaving the field far behind. On Saturday he had Rice, a tired man, to contend with and everything should have been easy. But Rice came under the tape first Rice also did 20 feet 2 inches and won the broad jump. College of Hawaii failed to enter in several of the events which gave Oahu an advantage and kept down the total result.

Legislation for John Cummings looks favorable and the old chap will probably get back the five thousand dollars he was assessed by the military court in 1895. Cummings is an interesting character and during the monarchy was an entertainer, second only to Sam Parker. I think both served Kalakaua as premier at different times and they did much to make the monarchy in Hawaii fashionable with the tourists who came in these days. And few and good they were. There were none of the "personally conducted" crowds who carried their own napkins and soap but good fellows, with their wives or without. During the trouble in '95 Cummings was one of the very few of the insurgents who had real money. I guess he helped pay for the guns that the late William Rickard bought through "Major Seward," an apparent pensioner on old John. At all events

Aloha Lodge Pays Off Indebtedness and Plans Celebration.

Aloha Lodge, K. of P., has accomplished a feat which any order should reasonably be proud of. A little less than nine years ago, the members of this lodge determined to build a castle hall. The undertaking was a big one, especially so as the lodge at that time could not boast nearly so large a membership as it does at the present time. The result of their determination and perseverance is seen in the present K. of P. Hall in Wailuku. For years the struggle was a bitter one to pay the interest on the debt, and in addition pay off part of the indebtedness each year. Gradually the load began to lighten; new members joined the order, until today the Lodge is in a flourishing condition, and two weeks ago the last dollar of indebtedness was lifted from the building.

In celebration of this happy event the Lodge is planning to give a banquet and dance, such as they were famed for in years past. The date set for this affair is Saturday evening, April 15th, and there is no question but that it will at least equal any entertainment of the kind ever given in Wailuku.

Celebration at Puunene.

Last Saturday evening the members of the Puunene Athletic Club entertained their friends at the club rooms. As usual, this was made the occasion for a jolly good time. Dancing was enjoyed until eleven o'clock, when the guests were invited to the dining room of the club, where they sat down to a feast of good things. The speeches which followed the banquet were both instructive and entertaining. They were instructive in that it showed what a large number of people there are on Maui who cannot make a speech, and entertaining in their brevity. Taking into consideration that this was the anniversary of Ireland's patron saint, it is remarkable. Altogether everyone had an enjoyable time, and the wonder is there are not more such entertainments given.
